

Origin of the Title: "Prince of Wales."

After the conquest of Wales, Edward the First continued for sometime to reside in that country, for he found great difficulty in subduing the natives. At last all the nobility of that country submitted to Edward, and the English laws were established in that principality. Edward promised the nobility a prince who was to be a Welsh man by birth and <sup>who</sup> was not to be able to speak one word of English.
