

Daijo Katogako.
Final Examination in English Literature.

It is impossible for us to live in the world, without tolerating the separateness of other personalities or annihilating to a certain degree those of our own.
to annihilate one's own personality

Am I bound to observe that odious custom of eating twice or three times as much as I desire in company even at the expense of my health? If it is a breach of good manners not to commit excesses, I must be an ill-bred and unbecoming guest at my host's table. I am certainly

I doubt if he ^{is} doubtful that ^{his} your claim to consideration ^{rests} as much on ^{his} your merits as on your ^{his} noble descent. ^{is} his claim to consideration ^{rests} as much in his merits.

I ^{can} lay myself out to ~~reconcile~~ ^{reconcile} reconcile the dead friendship between A & B. Every attempt, however, on my part, failed to produce the desired effect. It only confirmed the total ^{unreconcilable} ~~total~~ animosity between them. Each seemed to have imbibed some opinions prejudicial to the other ~~which~~ ^{had} left small place in ^{their} minds for sorrow ~~at the separation~~ ^{at the separation}.

No person will ~~be~~ ^{be} rendering my persuasive bootless ~~it~~ put up with ^{such} ~~the~~ ^{an} outrageous attack on your ⁱⁿ ~~your~~ ^{side} ~~part~~ ^{side} ~~side~~ you have reason on your side in demanding an explanation. It is the only course consistent with your dignity.

My favourable anticipations about the youth ^{were} ~~was~~ cruelly disappointed. For it turned out that the youth, though he ^{had} ~~was~~ bright & intelligent at first was a duncel ~~(fool)~~ after all. ^{was really a duncel}

I cruelly disappointed my father's favourable anticipation, for I ^{wrote} ~~accomplished~~ accomplished nothing worth ^{bringing} ~~bringing~~ ^{to} ~~to~~ ^{public attention} during his lifetime.