

I. I. A. B. C.

- I a He is not worthy of wine who drinks it like water.
 b My gorge rose within me.
 16 c A rolling stone gathers no moss.
 d The deeds of men are seeds of fate

16 II I enjoyed all the novelty of change and the charms which grace new lodgings before one has found out the defects.

16 III I desired the booksellers to make an offer themselves; but the dunces an offer would they make.

16 IV The great metropolis lay stretched before me, buried under a home-made cloud of murky smoke.

18 V The squire had been used to parish homage all his life, used to the presupposition that his family, his tankards, and everything that was his, were the oldest and best; and as he never associated with any gentry higher than himself, his opinion was not disturbed by comparisons.

18 VI Favourable chance is the god of all men who follow their own devices instead of obeying a law they believe in.
