

II, I.

K. Natsune

1. Give some antonyms: - 2 a homogeneous      b subterranean      c upheaval d submerge      e normal      f retrospect g chaos      h speculative      i eject j facility

2. Distinguish: - 2

a allusion, suggestion      b adjacent, adjacent c unavoidable, irresistible      d throes, pains e to deal in, to deal with

3. Change the verbs in the following: - a The Earth's surface is subject to constant change.

b The wealth and fertility of Egypt are attributed to the Nile inundation.

4. Friendship has many recommendations to its cultivation. By far the most important is its lasting influence upon your life which you can never miss. As it is the superstructure built upon the foundation of sympathy and right principles, it is a key to your nature in unfolding your deep-seated emotions and undeveloped virtues which you may pass by ~~as~~ they lie dormant. It is a sort of safety-valve, too, in relieving you of your swelling heart and unbearable grief. Lastly, if you cherish it long enough with constant care, you may find in it an emblem of permanence and grandeur amid other fleeting passions.

5. Sunday in London is the very worst adapted for pleasure. There is a gloom on that day which seems to hang over us, a weight in the air. Especially when it rains, the few passers-by under their umbrellas, look anything but comfortable. You don't appreciate a London Sunday, if you appreciate the English character.

6. Imitate & criticize: -

Love is an image of God, and not a lifeless image; not one painted on paper, but the living essence of the Divine nature, which beams full of all goodness. - Luther

15/6/03

