II. Explain the underlined portions:—

1. It yet wants much of sunrise2. We have run through all the ten categories of my condition.3 It was a year of brilliant water, set as it were in the gloom of my experience.4. I was too confidential and communicative of my own private affairs.5. I could throttle them between heaven and earth with my fingers + thumb.6. I shrank from such hard studies with a sense of powerless feebleness that gave me an anguish the greater from remembering the time when I grappled with them to my hourly delight.

Lit-III Year-continued.

III. Translate the following:—

1. "He's ~~is~~ busy with learning," said the lad, "and he's terrible wise. But for all that, sometimes he'll teach me a bit out o' the Readamadeasy."

2. The precision, concentrateness and quickness, with which he first seemed to arrange and then execute his ideas, showed clearly that he possessed to the full that business faculty too often despised, but which, out of very ordinary material, often makes a clever man, and without which the cleverest man alive can never be altogether a great man.

3. An inhuman moralist who shows little conscience in the penances he inflicts and the efforts of abstinence he exacts, may try, but in vain to frighten me ~~in~~ by a few hard words into sending out on a large freight of self-denial upon a cruising voyage of moral improvement,
