

Poetry. That which sets forth a part-
To worship Nature with a choral heart-

Leigh Hunt.

Poetry is the spirit which sets forth
at harmony with God

author of
"on Eng. Writers"

Adam Smith と Disraeli からの引用

Coleridge: Ancient Mariner

"Never blends our pleasure, or our pride
With sorrow, its meanest - their that feel"

Nature (from Perry)

Spectator. No. 414.

"Tho' there are several of wiled scenes, that are more more delightful than any Artificial shows; yet we find the works of Nature still more pleasant tho' more they resemble those of art."

"that unprosperous race of man, called men of letters, must necessarily occupy their present forlorn state in society much as formerly, when a scholar & a beggar seemed seem to have been terms very nearly synonymous"

"Wealth of Nations" i. 182

Man is considered only as he wheels on the wharf or as he spins in the factory; but man as a noble being of meditation, or impelled to action by more generous passions, has been struck out of the system of our political economy economists

Literary Character of Men of Genius.

Adversaries of Literature p. 29

Disraeli