

Old Times and New.

By J. GEORGE TETLEY, D.D., Canon Residentiary of Bristol. Second and Revised Edition. Demy 8vo, cloth. With Frontispiece. 7/6 net.

THIS volume consists partly of interesting family memoirs and partly of its author's recollections of distinguished people.

Among these may be mentioned Mr. Gladstone, Archbishop Temple, Frederick Denison Maurice, Charles Kingsley, Sir John Stainer, Mr. Gambier Parry, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Smith, and Canon Ainger, Dr. Tetley's colleague at Bristol.

"Canon Tetley's delightful book."—Spectator.

Dr. Parker and His Friends.

By G. HOLDEN PIKE, Author of "Oliver Cromwell and his Times," "Wesley and his Preachers," &c. With Portraits. Large Crown 8vo, cloth. 5/- net.

DR. PARKER is here portrayed as he lived and worked, many facts and incidents being given which are not now generally known. One chapter contains personal reminiscences, another relates to his work in London, while one section gives a succinct account of the City Temple and its ancestry. The "Friends" referred to were all men of mark. Separate chapters deal successively with Dr. Campbell, the Rev. John de Kewer Williams, Dr. Thomas Binney, Henry Ward Beecher, John Rylands of Manchester, &c. There are shorter notices of others.

Lady Jean: The Romance of the Great Douglas Cause.

By PERCY FITZGERALD, F.S.A.
With Photogravure and other
Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth.
12/- net.

ADMIRERS of Boswell will recall his almost fanatical devotion to "the great Douglas Cause," the lawsuit which aroused so much excitement in the mid-eighteenth century. A clear narrative for the general reader has now been evolved by Mr. Percy Fitzgerald from a mass of legal reports and other material relating to the case. The book depicts the extraordinary career of the spirited heroine, Lady Jean Douglas, and of her husband, Sir John Stewart, and describes their plots and strange adventures, and an attempt is made to show that the decision of the Courts in favour of the inheritor of the estates was open to serious doubts.

A History of Matrimonial Institutions.

By GEORGE ELLIOTT HOWARD,
Ph.D. 3 Vols. Super royal 8vo.
Per set, £2 2s. net.

THERE is urgent need that the rise and the social function of the human family should have far more earnest study than they now receive. It is in the hope of aiding somewhat towards winning for them due scientific recognition that this book is written.

In Part I, the author carefully traces the development of marriage and the family among primitive peoples; Part II, deals with matrimonial institutions in England; Part III., dealing with the subject in the United States, is of exceptional interest, inasmuch as the material here presented has never before been collected, and is nowhere else available to the general student.

"This is the most substantial and valuable work on its subject yet produced in our country. Scholarly, scientific, thorough, it is an inductive study of the first importance to every student of the primary social question—the question of the family."—New York Outlook.

The Secret of Petrarch.

By E. J. MILLS. With 13 Photo-gravure Plates, one in colour.
Demy 8vo, cloth. 12/- net.

THE title of "The Secret of Petrarch" is borrowed from one of the great writer's less known works. The first part of the book consists of a series of prose studies on various points in Petrarch which are still under discussion. The second part is a kind of dramatic poem into which the Laura of Petrarch's life and love is introduced.

"Its illustrations of the Petrarch country round Avignon will wake a Heimweh in those who know their Provence, and the piecing together of the lives of Petrarch and Laura from allusions in the poet's works is expressed in words full of painting. . . . The book may be regarded as a sort of 'Vita Nuova' of Petrarch."—Mr. Douglas Sladen in The Queen.

A Leader of Society at Napoleon's Court.

By CATHERINE BEARNE, Author of
"Lives and Times of the Early Valois Queens," &c. Second impression. Fully Illustrated. Large crown 8vo, cloth. 10/6

THIS book tells the story of Laura Permon, wife of General Junot (the Duc d'Abrantes), one of Napoleon's most famous generals. Connected by blood with both the old and new régime, Laura spent her childhood amongst the storms and terrors of the great Revolution, her youth in the wild reckless gaiety of the Imperial Court, and her later years in the artistic and literary society of Rome and Paris after the Restoration. Impetuous, affectionate, courageous, extravagant, she was always charming; while her intimacy with Napoleon and his family, her friendships with celebrated persons of all parties and of different nationalities, and the alternate perils and splendour of her lot read more like a romance than a true history.

"It is no exaggeration to say that there is not a dull page in it."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Wellington's Operations in the Peninsula (1808-1814).

By Captain LEWIS BUTLER. With
Maps. 2 Vols. Demy 8vo, cloth.
32/- net.

[Also in Six paper Parts, at 5/- each net.]

"This very careful, thorough, and learned history is intended for those who have not leisure to study the luminous, but voluminous, Napier. It gives a condensed sketch of the various operations, and brings forward certain points of military detail which have not been insisted on by earlier historians. Wherever we have been able to test Captain Butler's statements we have found them accurate, while we must testify to the clearness and precision with which he has set them down."—Daily News.

"The book is the lucid and conscientious work of a sound soldier."—Outlook.
