

1. Sidgwick (The Methods of Ethics) James Stewart + 曰、He points out for instance that theft is regarded as a very venial offence in the South Sea Islands, because little or no labour is then required to support life; that the lending of money for interest is commonly reprehended in societies where commerce is imperfectly developed, because the usurer in such communities is commonly in the odious position of writing again out of the hard necessities of his fellows; & that when the legal arrangements for punishing crime are imperfect 1915 cent.

Chastity & Romanticism

Percy " " "

(Macpherson) Ossian " "

(Steuers) "Horrible" " "

"Gothic" " "

Self preservation

Self-abandonment

Judaic moral passionate private murder is either justified or regarded very leniently. . . . . 455, foot note - 12 1. Among definite changes in the current morality of the Graeco-Roman civilised world which are to be attributed mainly if not entirely to the extension & intensification of sympathy due to Christianity, the following may be specially noted: (1) the severe condemnation & final suppression of the practice of exposing infants; (2) effective abhorrence of the barbarism of gladiatorial combats; (3) immediate moral mitigation of slavery & a strong